

Repertory Exercises

Practice Makes Perfect

Arjen Pasma - Hardcover 512 pages

Many homeopaths feel that during their homeopathic training, they have never been taught well enough the structure and use of the repertory. This magnificent book is not only useful for the student (and for schools) but also for the practitioner who wants to know everything about the structure of the repertory and finally understand how to use it well.

A qualified, classically working homeopath with many years of experience, will still consult the repertory for the majority of acute and chronic cases. Hahnemann already felt the need for a repertory and was the first homeopath to compile one. It was written in Latin and titled Fragmenta de viribus medicamentorum positivis, sine in sano corpore observativis (published in 1805). To become a successful homeopath it is essential, besides acquiring good philosophy and materia medica knowledge, to spend plenty of time studying the repertory in detail.

You will find that, after having done these 42 series of exercises in a sincere way and reading the additional explanatory information about the repertory structure given throughout the answers, the repertory will have become your great assistant and true friend.

The book also includes an explanation chapter about all aspects of the two versions of Synthesis: The remedies, the relative reliability of authors (sources) etc. Further chapters contain articles from J.T. Kent and M. Tyler about Repertorising, Remedy relationships, extensive Word indexes for both the Essential Synthesis and Synthesis 9.1

Arjen Pasma has been teaching how to use the homeopathic repertory in The Netherlands and several other European countries for about 25 years. More recently he has been teaching in Kenya and Malawi. At several colleges in The Netherlands the question-series from this book are done over a period of two or three years, during classes and as homework.

Eva Demaya project in Malawi - Africa

The author of "Practice Makes Perfect" is also involved with the Eva Demaya project in Malawi - Africa. With the link below you can see him teach a basic introduction lecture to health practitioners like the ones who are in training in Malawi. It also comes with two interesting example cases.

When the author is in Malawi, he treats about 40 (acute and chronic) cases per day.

Arjen says "It is really wonderful to see the power of homeopathy both for chronic as well as acute cases, if one knows how to use the Repertory Synthesis well, and if you know the "common" materia medica well and how to apply case analysis theory well as I teach in the book Practice Makes Perfect."

What Frederik Schroyens said about the book Practice Makes Perfect

Dear Arjen,

Yesterday I received the book "Practice makes perfect" and I am most elated.

Your question series are known to me since many years and I like them since ever.

With this new book, so beautifully edited and laid out, the quality of your work becomes even more apparent. I will recommend this book wherever I teach and I am sure that it will be a companion to all who wish to master the repertory.

So far I have not seen a similar work that is so practical and well thought to reach this goal!

Thank you for your great contribution to our art!

Dr Frederik Schroyens
